SITE SESSIONS

The Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI): What in the world are we thinking about?

From climate change to security threats and financial crises, the world is facing challenges that are largely unaddressed due to inadequate international efforts. Global think tanks can help break through the inertia, bridging the gap between technical knowledge and power. CIGI is an independent, nonpartisan think tank on international governance, led by experienced practitioners and distinguished academics. CIGI believes that better international governance can improve the lives of people everywhere, by increasing prosperity, ensuring global sustainability, addressing inequality and safeguarding human rights, and promoting a more secure world. This site visit will describe CIGI's research streams and how it strives to fulfill its mission. It will also address one of CIGI's major projects: the Africa Initiative—a multi-year, joint-programme with Makerere University in Uganda, and the South African Institute for International Affairs, that aims to contribute to the deepening of Africa's capacity and knowledge. The final aspect of our site visit will feature presentations from students who recently participated in a grant project between CIGI and the Institute for New Economic Thinking, which saw them attend a major conference in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, on new economic thinking.

SITE SESSIONS

Canadian Mental Health Association and Waterloo Region Self Help

In this site session, two community partners, the Grand River Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association (<http://www.cmhagrb.on.ca/dnn/>) and Waterloo Region Self Help (WRSH), and one university partner, the Community Psychology program of Wilfrid Laurier University, describe two partnership projects. The first involved a study with all three partners examining a paradigm shift in mental health that occurred in Waterloo Region. The second was a partnership involving a longitudinal evaluation of consumer/survivor initiatives, including WRSH.

Canadian Mental Health Association and Waterloo Region Self Help, 67 King St. E., Kitchener

Centre for Community-Based Research (CCBR) at <http://www.communitybasedresearch.ca/>

CCBR is a leader in using community-based research to inspire social change. This session will begin with an overview of the organization's mission, history, structure, demonstrating how it is linked to a vision of using research as a catalyst for social change. Participants will explore the three building blocks of social innovation used in CCBR: knowledge production (gathering and analyzing information that better informs people working for social change); knowledge mobilization (creatively communicating research findings in ways that speak to people); and community mobilization (using research to build relationships among people who, in turn, use the knowledge they jointly produce to guide their collective social action).
