Summer Student Internship

Centre for Community Based Research (CCBR)
www.communitybasedresearch.ca

The Centre for Community Based Research (CCBR) is seeking a part-time intern (3 days/week) between July 1 and August 31, 2018. This internship will offer a supportive environment with practical opportunities to learn about community-based research. The intern will be responsible for supporting CCBR's website refresh as well as other projects and administrative tasks.

The internship will be based at the Centre for Community Based Research at the University of Waterloo (St. Paul's University College). The successful applicant will be a student with some post-secondary experience/knowledge and have interest in and desire to learn about community-based research and community development.

To apply

Applicants should send a cover letter and resume to:
general@communitybasedresearch.ca by June 15, 2018.

About Us

CCBR is a non-profit organization located on the University of Waterloo campus with a mission to build more responsive and supportive communities. CCBR is committed to social change and the development of communities and human services that are responsive and supportive, especially for people with limited access to power and opportunity. Demonstrating leadership through research, education and community involvement, CCBR stimulates the creation of awareness, policies, and practices that advance equitable participation and integration of all members of our community. Since 1982 CCBR has conducted over 400 projects that have addressed a range of societal issues.
